

Dear friends and executors,

3/16/00

I have not trouble<sup>d</sup> you with these many and persisting departures from what is, I think, medically proper and essential but these many untoward incidents, the most recent<sup>so painful</sup> that I could not control my legs and arms in their spasms that were faster than I can direct them to move. I do not take the time now for any fuller explanation <sup>and</sup> but it defies the ~~off~~ to treat each of these wrongful events as no more <sup>Gambro</sup> than a mere coincidence. They were triggered by apparent greed of the ~~Gambro~~ healthcare system (ugh) when it sought to reduce the burden on each employee rather than hire more employees. One of you has informed me that Gambro, of Swedish ~~partnership~~ seems intent on a campaign to control as much as it can of kidney dialysis <sup>within</sup> in the US, Gambro, visibly, lashed up on ~~for~~ the upper arm implants for the dialysis and I can think of no other cause for the lashing up of the other. Each required me to spend <sup>five</sup> days at the Johns Hopkins ~~h~~ hospital in Baltimore. The inserts were praised highly by all who examined them locally. ~~Cost Medicare 10 days plus the surgery~~

In at least the second lashing up, which a Gambro minor official observed because he was ~~conscious~~ called to correct it, he did not even try to do that. It then seemed that the ~~technician~~ technician, for the second time, had inserted the hollow needle in the <sup>wire</sup> wrong place <sup>by</sup> eliminating the usefulness of that superior surgery that all raved ~~about~~ about <sup>about</sup> by the ~~locals~~ who <sup>saw</sup> them. That technician had removed the hollow needles after the <sup>ent</sup> had inserted heparin, an anti-coagulant that usually last for eight hours. Gambro would not let me go home although <sup>had lived without incident with</sup> ~~at that~~ ~~for three weeks of two hospital~~ daily for at least three weeks so I knew there was no danger at home. But apparently Gambro feared a law suit and it got an order from <sup>its</sup> Dr. Johnson to hospitalise me. <sup>This</sup> ~~had not~~ been necessary those three previous weeks when the heparin did not bleed <sup>after</sup> ~~those~~ <sup>two times</sup> daily when <sup>at Gambro</sup> ~~when I was home. With blood~~ <sup>not</sup> ~~not~~ <sup>they</sup> would not let me drive to the hospital, less than a mile away, would not drive me there, would not let me drive with one of them with me to assure safety. All they cared about was getting closed up and getting home. Medicare does not pay for local hospital bills so I got stuck with it. For the rest of <sup>this</sup> ~~these~~ gross Gambro negligence, which was the removal of the hollow needles before the heparin was injected- which means the guaranteed anticoagulation of the eight-hour heparin or the assured continued bleeding <sup>until</sup> the heparin was exhausted, Gambro had ~~left~~ me in the hospital. To cover its ass, rather than to protect me. From the record I needed no protection. But in confining me in the hospital I <sup>had</sup> to leave <sup>all</sup> alone when that is not safe for her. And I did worry about that all the time I was hospitalized when there was no legitimate need for that.

Cost Medicare about a thousand. ~~That on right. Me much wry.~~

Gambro ~~is~~ nothing for its gross negligence.

I think it fired that technician. - do not recall seeing her since then.

What has caused this sharpest pain I can't recall was not of any possible medical need or purpose. Its sole usefulness was in what can be interpreted as a continuous campaign to teach me a less of what they can do to any upstart that wants them to live within the law and regulations and not to ~~rip~~ Medicare <sup>in</sup> anyone else off.

I have been making records since it became apparent that no legitimate medical purpose was served by these abuses and endangerings <sup>ings</sup> of me and what may irritate this billionaire multinational greed merchant is that in each and every instance of these abuses, one way or another have I prevailed.

I think I have adequate records on them and when - can I'll try to put them in chronological order. If anyone wants them after that is done I'll provide copies. This is to let you know.

What is particularly disturbing is that the time for me to enter dialysis, which I understand is permanent, <sup>may have</sup> not been reached when without consulting me, Dr. Johnson got me ~~me~~ started in it when I was in the local hospital- just after he had observed an improvement <sup>in</sup> that told him not to continue to see me monthly but to make it every three months. Aside from these events that are not mere coincidence and should not have happened in any event, I can see no improvement in the way I feel, and I feel less good than before the dialysis, but it is without question that whether or not normal, and ~~Gambro~~ Gambro has not addressed this in any way, from the dialysis I grow steadily more unsteady on my feet and ever so much weaker, with this pronounced shiftly after I am home. No problem sitting at my deck or in living but for some weeks I have not left home the dialysis day once I am home and most I had to take a nap.

I am also disturbed that other than from an infrequent Gambro nurse or technician, I get no explanations and no rational justification.

Gambro pretends these untoward events are merely coincidence, as some may perhaps be, but the endless succession of them and this last, this really painful abuse, was not accidental and was not any kind of coincidence. Other than my refusing again to be intimidated into accepting what is improper, wrong and potentially dangerous to me.

I have no reason to believe or even to suspect that there can be some kind of federal involvement in <sup>any</sup> of this but other than the narrow Gambro interest only some federal interest can be suspected.
